We love a good smoke bomb image and to our Instagram, we are not the only ones. Whether you use them for engagement photos, like a fun holiday, or just put them off to add some color to your portraits, the effect is undeniable. We always get questions about smoke bombs and how they work, so let's cover the basics! Staining smoke bombs? Yes, they can. And the sparks can also burn if you are not careful. Set them off in the distance and get some help from a supplier or friend. After putting the smoke bomb down, if you are 2-3 meters away and only standing in the cloud of smoke, it should NOT stain your clothes or anything for that matter. They can stain the ground, but if they remain on the sides... definitely something to think about when planning when and how to use smoke bombs today. If you plan to spend doing a pre-wedding day test drive (not in your wedding clothes!!!) just to make sure that the ones you bought didn't have stains. How long do they last? You will be photo-ready - the longest lasts about 90 seconds! And when you pull the trigger, it takes up to 10 seconds to release completely. Can you use smoke bombs at night? Yes! In fact, the effect can be very cool. Just make sure you have some good backlight to capture the mood. What about security? Pay attention to strong winds and inhalation of the smoke. You should also consider crowds and highly combustible areas. Bring a metal bucket, drop used smoke bombs and a bottle of water to ensure they are completely extinguished. You should be in an open area outdoors and avoid areas that are too dry and prone to catching fire. What should I tell my photographer? See if your photographer has worked with smoke bombs before! There are some tricks of trade and ideas they may need to catch the perfect shot. You can even do some training rounds before lighting the plums! If you have any images for inspiration (ahem, many of which are below!), be sure to send them over in advance. Smoke bombs are considered a firework! Please note that smoke bombs are considered a fireworks display and are therefore illegal on national park land (and perhaps even on your site), so do research in advance to ensure that you are allowed to use them for your photos. This also means that you can not fly with them! Where can I buy smoke bombs? Several photographers we spoke to recommended these wire pull smoke grenades from Enola Gaye because they burn cool, not hot. Cool burning bombs are ideal if you plan to hold them and not put them off in the background. In addition, these smoke bombs are all poison-free smoke with a fully biodegradable body. You can also check out Amazon, Smoke Effect and Shutter Bombs. And now, without further ado, here are the smoke bomb pictures you need to see. Save them, love them, be inspired - and then go and make your own! Skip to Content Please share your location to continue © 1996-2015, Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates in this project I show you how I made a light colored pull ring smoke bomb. The key to this construction was to make the most simple and reliable pull ring lighter possible, and it doesn't get much easier than two matches, an elastic band and an off-cut of tip from the match box. It was also very fast and cheap. How to make a colored smoke bomb I found by far the easiest, safest and fastest way is to buy them already made. I searched the internet, eBay and Amazon and came up with a few good options. In the UK I found Party Packs to be the cheapest. A simple search on their smoke bomb website showed the results. On Amazon UK I found these under the phrase smoke pellet. In the US, a search on eBay for a smoke bomb or smoke bomb appears in the United States. To light the smoke pellet and burn it faster I drilled through the middle of the colored pellet to insert a fuse, this seemed to increase the burn rate, but in testing, a fuse that runs down the side of the pellet also worked well, just not quite so fast. As it turned out some of the pellets burned warmer and faster than others, although none I tested actually caught fire. To prevent me from burning my hands when I foolishly held them for the video, I encapsulated them in cardboard and aluminum foil to act as insulation. was the same method I used in the Pokemon building to stop melted. Pulling ring teeth To make a colored smoke grenade, a good pull ring teeth were required. I searched the internet and YouTube for inspiration but couldn't find anything I liked. They were either too complicated, too expensive or unreliable. Finally, I came up with the simple design you see in the video, great for little simple safe smoke bombs. Colored smoke grenade Make the colored smoke grenades in the video it was just a matter of placing the mounted smoke pellet, fuse and igniter inside a container. These were just empty multivitamin bottles and vending machines, the hole in the top to release the smoke was about 18mm, and this was then hidden by a plastic brushette. Finally, a wire ring was added for effect or an interception of material to form a category. Smoke grenades made of waste Simple migratory antennas Trip wire teeth Airsoft trip wire I tested exactly the same homemade teeth on a tripwire, no surprise it worked fine. I did even decide to adjust the design and create some raised pages. This had the added bonus of further limiting the striker. The above project is aimed at adults for education and entertainment purposes only, not to replicate, ever. Ever.
